DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

1. Claims 1-20 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being incomplete for omitting essential elements, such omission amounting to a gap between the elements. See MPEP § 2172.01. Applicant claimed, "...to select a subcarrier..." (e.g., in claim 1). It is unclear because a feature essential for the definition of the invention is missing wherein selecting a subcarrier (or carrier) is only possible if there are plurality of subcarrier and one subcarrier to select from; this implies that the communication is performed using a form of multi carrier modulation. By omitting this implicit feature the scope of the claim becomes unclear;

Claim 5. It is unclear how "active electronic devices..." formulate the "channel knowledge".

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Chini et al. ('Chini' hereinafter)(US 2002/0191533).

As to claims 1-4, 11 and 17, Chini discloses a multicarrier communication system comprising a transmitter 500 (fig. 5) having channel knowledge wherein transmitter and receiver determine the channel knowledge. Transmitter by sending a channel information request to the receiver 550 (fig. 5) to characterize all carriers associated with the channel link and receiver analyzes the received signal and characterizes the data placed on each carrier, transmitter receives an out put of the carrier map indicating the channel knowledge of communication link to puncture (deleting code symbols periodically from the sequence for purpose of constructing a higher rate code and deleting parity bits (see [0041], [0029] and [0030]). As to claim 17, Chini further discloses a processing unit 400 coupled to receiver and a memory 410 which can also function as a form of SRAM (it caches data traveling between two MCM systems) (see [0025] and fig. 4). As to claim 2, the transmitter, disclosed by Chini, is an OFDM transmitter (see [0029]).

As to claims 5-10, 12-16 and 18-20 as discussed in the rejection of claim 1 above, Chini is concerned with multi-path fading, interference in the same field of endeavor as the current invention, and obtains channel knowledge from these activities and devices therein (see [0003]-[0007]). Chini further discloses puncturing the carrier by placing energy without including data wherein in other subcarriers do not require placing energy that are in reliable state. Chini also discloses that the energy is also placed into the punctured subcarrier to reduce peak to average power ratio (see {0004}, [0006] and [0021] and figs. 1-2).

3. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
